Blocking another user is desirable if they are acting maliciously or are spamming your repository (for instance, by adding unsolicited comments in issues). For such cases, Forgejo provides the functionality to block other users. When you block a user, Forgejo does not explicitly notify them, but they may learn through an interaction with you that is blocked.

How to block Someone

In order to block another user, go to their profile page and click on the button with three dots. The menu that is shown has a "Block" action, click on it.

A popup will show; please read carefully what blocking another user implies, and if you accept the implications, click on Yes.

Please note that blocking a user has other effects, such as:

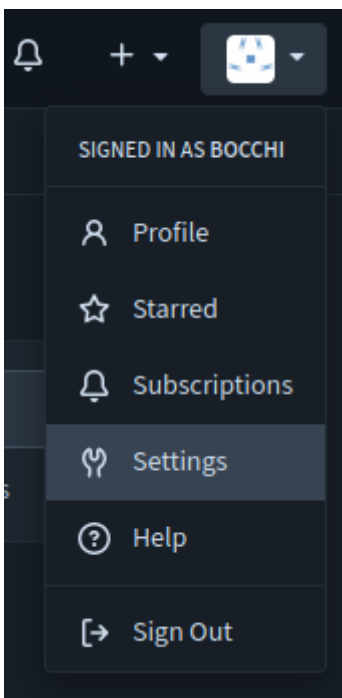

- You will stop following each other and will not be able to follow each other.
- This user will not be able to interact with the repositories you own, or the issues and comments you have created.
- You will not be able to add each other as repository collaborators.

List of blocked Users and Unblocking

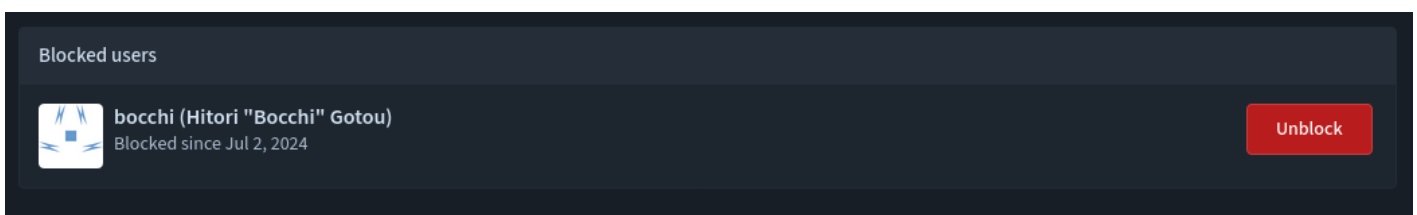

If you would like to see the list of users you've blocked, navigate to your user profile in the top-right corner and click on the settings item.

Select the Blocked Users item in the menu. This navigates you to the page where the users you've blocked are listed.

To unblock someone, click on the unblock button next to their name.

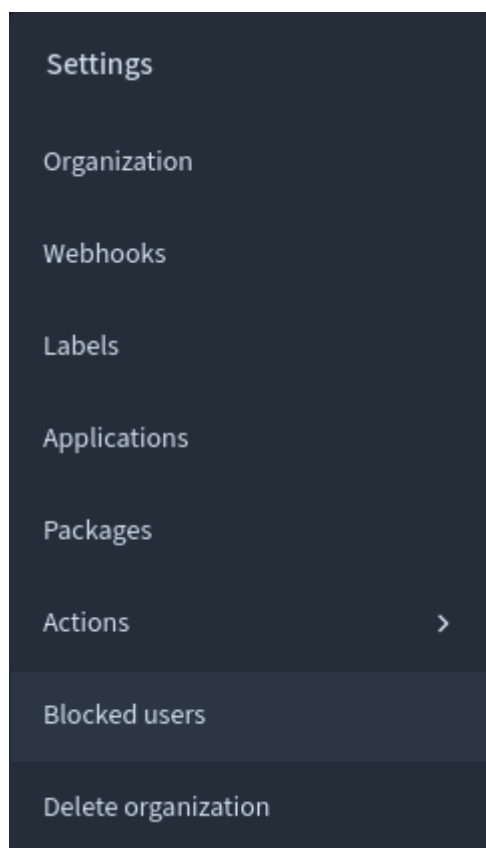

How to block Someone as an organization

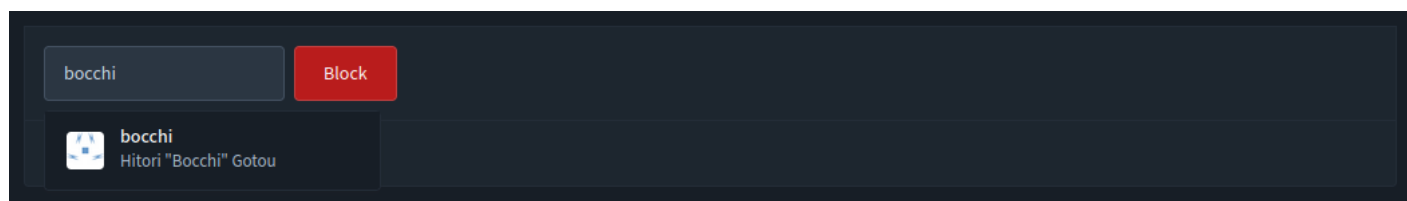

It is possible to block a user from an organization; this has the same implications as a normal user blocking another user. To block a user from an organization, you must be on that organization's Owners team.

Navigate to your organization's settings and select the Blocked Users page.

Find the person you want to block in the search bar, select the user, and click block.

You will now see the blocked users in the list, along with the date they were blocked.

To unblock that person, you can click the unblock button next to their name.

The user has been unblocked successfully.

Implications of blocking a User

When you block a user:

- You stop following them.
- They stop following you.
- They are removed as collaborators on repositories you own as an individual.
- All pending repository transfers caused by them are removed.

After you've blocked them:

- They cannot cause any notifications for you anymore by mentioning you.
- They cannot open issues or pull requests on repositories you own.
- They cannot add reactions to your comments.
- They cannot post comments on issues and pull requests you've opened.
- They cannot transfer repositories to you.
